audience reviews

Ain't Misbehavin', Magic Circle Theatre

Review: Opening night normally is not to be the best time to see any new production. But I was extremely impressed about how the chosen five performers were all vocally on. Rarely, in a community theater do you see and hear a cast that is ALL harmonious. This is a musical that requires a lot of harmony, complimentary parts and just plain fun while working extremely hard at singing some complicated arrangements. The cast pulls it off, which bodes well for the musical direction. My only criticism is Magic Circle has an obviously talented live band, but due to the theaters size and layout the band is not seen and comes through the sound system as if a recording. I love the intimacy of the performance, but miss "hearing" the live sound of the instruments. I will definitely tell friends and be back to see this show again.

Review: I enjoyed this show. it was fun and well done, although a bit hard to understand at times, this did not take away from the show much at all. Very intimate, the music vocals were amazing. a must see
