audience reviews

Camelot, Magic Circle Theatre

Review: We saw this last weekend, and it was a very impressive production. What a great ensemble!! Many talented performers. John Chitambar was excellent in the role of King Arthur, giving a very emotional performance that nailed all the highs and lows of King Arthur. Guinevere had a beautiful, Broadway-quality singing voice. Definitely recommend this show to anyone!

Review: I would agree that this show is definitely a must see, however i do not agree with the casting of Arthur. His version of the character was not believable. I do not think that he captured the ups and downs of Arthur at all. Rather he was very much the same the whole time. His pauses and monotone voice was very boring and i felt nothing for the character or what he was going through. Jenna Cook however, its her best performance. I have seen her in a few shows and I believe that she has truly opened up to her acting. She has always had an amazing voice, but seemed to be disconnected from her characters. in this show however she nailed it, and i felt so bad for her situation in the show. She has truly blossomed into a very talented actress. Rosemarie has yet again proven that even with subtle sets the story and the feeling of a show can still be captured. I definitely reccomend everybody seeing this show, then watching the movie to see how Arthur should be portrayed.

Review: The show is a must see. Once again Magic Circle has produced an outstanding show. I have to disagree with the second review and found Arthur to be outstanding. I felt his energy, passion, and emotions were strong throughout the entire show. I believe he nailed the high and lows of Arthur in a very profound way. He actually had me crying! I especially enjoyed the character of Pelly. He was professional, funny, and truly a seasoned actor. Guinevere has a lovely voice and looks beautiful.

I would like to see more passion/chemistry between her and Lancelot. Great job! Hats off to the ensemble and the rest of the cast. Mordred was wonderful. I recommend that everyone see this fantastic show and enjoy the story so wonderfully played by the entire cast.

Review: Arthur was a kind of over the top. His closing monologue in the second act was so over acted the audience did not know how to respond and were squirming in their seats. I think if he toned it down a little it would have been better. But he was just too big, that it was funny.

Review: Thank you for a wonderful show. We saw it last weekend and enjoyed it. Congratulations to the cast. We were particularly impressed with Arthur. Mr Chitambar's portrayal was passionate and human...simply excellent. Thank you.
